

For some people, the best way to learn is by doing. When applied to nursing education, that's where clinical experiences come in. At Duke University School of Nursing, students benefit from accessing clinical expertise via partnerships with local organizations such as Duke Health and the Veterans Administration, and through preceptors at clinics and hospitals nationwide.