

First accepted students:
Fall 2014

Lead Faculty:
James “Les” Harmon,
DNP’12, RN, ANP-BC, AAHIVS
Associate Professor

The HIV/AIDS specialty is designed to prepare nurse practitioners to provide the full spectrum of primary care for people with HIV. In addition to the general NP curriculum, the HIV specialty students com

According to Dr. Harmon,

“The first generation of HIV health care providers is now aging and retiring, and over time HIV has evolved into a manageable chronic disease. This has resulted in a workforce need for more health care providers skilled in both HIV who can assist to provide exceptional women’s healthcare.

I was motivated to accept the challenge of creating the Women’s Health Nurse Practitioner program by both my own passion to provide women’s healthcare, as well as hearing from several nurses in North Carolina, and current and previous nurse practitioner students who wanted

First accepted students:
Spring 2015

Lead Faculty:
Kathryn J. Trotter,
DNP’12, CNM, FNP-C,
FAANP, FAAN
Associate Professor

Already known to be comprehensive and rigorous, students remark how supportive it is at Duke with a mentorship program and fun on-campus group activities. The program’s coursework combines broad foundational and interdisciplinary knowledge with specialty knowledge essential for the unique health needs of women. There are opportunities for adolescent population focus, infertility, high-risk pregnancy, lactation support and the women veteran population. This is the only program in the country which includes Centering Pregnancy® group facilitation training as part of the curriculum.

more training in the field.”